

Writing, Storytelling, and Discovery

Fall 2018

A four-part course in creative non-fiction writing to improve your therapy, to promote your practice, and to delight yourself.

Whether you are in private practice, work for an agency, are starting out, have a few years of experience or on your way to becoming a seasoned veteran this course in writing can be for you. You will learn how to create and compose essays and stories for your clients, potential clients, or for publication. Starting from your experiences, observations, or musings, you will learn how to set it down on paper and in the process, make discoveries that will reveal the known and the not-yet known, the said and the unsaid. You will learn a process of moving from not-knowing, to knowing, to wisdom.

October 26 – next three dates to be determined (via Doodle)

About a month apart

Four Friday mornings 9am – 1pm

16 CEU's

MFT CE: 2016-310

Cost: $190

Refreshments provided

Location: 2807 Fernwood Street, Roseville 55113

651-636-4188

Equipment: laptop or paper tablet, and a brain, memory, and imagination.

Instructor:

Ken Stewart, Ph.D. has been practicing since 1975. He is an essayist, poet, and published writer in several professional journals. He has written, with Brier Miller, the “He said - She said” column for many years in the MAMFT News. You can see samples of his writing at www.kennethstewart.com

Contact: ken@kennethstewart.com 612-868-0366